INDUSTRIAL-ORGANIZATIONAL PSYCHOLOGISTS HAVE ASSESSED ME AND FOUND THE FOLLOWING

Working with People

“Working with People” describes how you approach building relationships and interacting with others in a work context.

I successfully build and maintain mutually beneficial relationships with others to strengthen my knowledge and effectiveness.

- Continue to build on your relationships and proactively identify opportunities to connect with others.

I tend to interact and readily engage with others in a way that resolves their issues.

- Follow up with others as appropriate to help ensure long-term satisfaction.

I have excellent insight into the complex relationships within team settings and how to bring people together to achieve a goal.

- I try to strike a balance between helping others and giving them room to contribute.

I am good at recognizing and understanding what other people are feeling.

- This helps me with developing effective relationships at work, but need not become overly involved in other peoples' concerns.

I may find it challenging to influence how others feel and act in difficult situations.

- I take a moment to pause, listen and understand the perspective of others before responding.

I tend to collaborate well with others and focus on team accomplishments and recognition over personal recognition.

- Be sure to stay open to working autonomously so I can recognise when a situation calls for it!

Working style and personality

“Work Style and Personality” describes the ways in which you prefer to interact with people and information to meet the demands of a work role.

I tend to remain calm even in times of pressure and can cope well when others are upset.

- Try to help others remain calm and be sure to empathise where necessary.

I may be comfortable pulling more from what I already know rather than applying new learnings.

- Try to stay open to learning new things where necessary as technology and innovation demand it.

Working with Information

“Working with information” describes how you approach new problems, make sense of the world around you and adapt to new challenges.

I'm open to looking at problems from many angles.

- Try my best to dig into and isolate the problem at hand to be as efficient as possible when I'm up against shorter deadlines.

I'm able to quickly switch between tasks.

- Follow up with others as appropriate to help ensure long-term satisfaction.

I easily process and manipulate numerical information.

- This is particularly useful when quickly making data-driven decisions. When communicating with others, include storytelling and visualisation to explain numerical concepts.

I am quickly able to problem-solve my way through most situations.

- I enjoy taking on new challenges and giving myself a chance to shine!

I have the capacity to readily process complex relationships in my mind.

- Others may struggle to keep up, so make sure I take the time to explain and draw out my ideas for them.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS

- National client that is part of the largest private hospital group in RSA since pre 2000
 - Have a number of clients with over 10-15 years history as clients
 - Involved on various levels with a number of large-scale upgrades and rollouts
 - Was the key technician servicing Accronym's (a then client) before they acquired my then employer Ritzy IT
 - Was Technical Manager and Senior Technician at Webstorm ISP, before the technical department was acquired by one of the directors.

CYCLING, ROCK CLIMBING AND HIKING

My wife roller skate and I would cycle with her. Hiking and rock climbing are another hobby shared with my wife, and are two outdoor activities that I enjoy for a variety of reasons. Mainly for the challenge of the hiking or rock climb, while enjoying the feeling of being in nature is always a great high. Hiking and rock climbing can also be a great way to get exercise and improve your physical fitness.
